Reason for applying CLP mentoring program for female engineering students?

I am one of the undergraduate engineering students in the Hong Kong university of Science and Technology. I would like to participate in this program as I want to work in the field in the future which is associated with the efficient energy use. And getting experience from the current working field is considered to be beneficial for me as a student who doesn't have much basic knowledge in the working field. As far as I know, CLP is one of the Asia's leading power companies, and I want to pursue my future in this-type of company so that I will be able to provide people more efficient technologies which enable them to live far convenient lives.

Any specific area would you like to get support, or to know more by participating in the mentoring program?

I would like to know what are the roles of the female engineers in the working fields, and job prospective as a female engineer. And I want to have a mentor who can give me a general advice in terms of academics and a future career so that I can shape my path in advance.
